Everything You Ever Wanted to Know About Bonds

Auctioneer licensees are required to renew their licenses every two years. Renewal notices are sent to regulants of the Board approximately 45 days before the expiration date on the license as a reminder to renew the license. Along with the renewal notice and required fees, proof of a current bond that commences no later than the effective date of the license and expires no sooner than the expiration date of the license in at least the amount of $10,000 must be submitted to the Board office in order for the license to be updated. If the fee is not received, or proof of the required bond is not received, or if the bond does not meet the Board's requirements, then the license will not be updated.

If you have not changed bond companies, you must submit the renewal/continuation certificate issued by your bond company that shows that your bond will run with the next two-year term of your license. If you have changed bond companies, you must submit the new bond that shows that your bond will run with the next two-year term of your license.

We often get phone calls from licensees who, upon discovering that their license has expired, state that the bond/insurance company was supposed to submit the bond to the Board office. Please be aware that you, as a regulant of the Board, are responsible for maintaining your license. While there is a 30-day grace period for renewing your license without penalty, you may not practice during any time that your license is expired. If you do not receive your updated license in the mail within a reasonable time, you should check with the Board office to verify that your bond has been received.

Please note that in addition to a bonds for your individual license, all auctioneering firms must have a current bond that meets the requirements above, as well. TM

Introducing . . . On-Line Payments

Licensees of the Board are now able to pay renewal fees for licenses on-line. This service is available 24 hours a day, 7 days a week to all boards within the Department of Professional and Occupational Regulation. The on-line renewal service is available to all licensees whose license expires August 31, 2003, or later. The licensee also has the option of updating their address if necessary.

On the renewal notices, which will continue to be mailed approximately 45 days prior to the expiration of the license, the licensee is provided with a temporary PIN number to access the on-line renewal service. The licensee then has the option of renewing on-line or by mail. On-line renewal payments must be made by credit card. Please note that your license cannot be renewed until proof of the required bond is received (see previous article). Even if the payment is made on-line in a timely manner, the license would be considered expired until such time as the required bond information is received in the Board office, and could be subject to additional renewal or reinstatement requirements.

Late payments and reinstatement fees CANNOT be paid on-line. Also, please note that the Board office must have an auction firm's tax ID number in order for firm renewal payments to be made on-line. Additionally, the firm license cannot be updated until proof of the required bond is received. TM

Did You Know . . .

ALL advertisements relating to an auction MUST contain the auctioneer's name and Virginia license number or the auction firm's name and Virginia license number. The name and number must be clearly displayed within the advertisement. Failure to do so could result in disciplinary action by the Board. TM

New Law Regarding Absolute Auctions

All Virginia licensed auctioneers were recently sent a memorandum containing the text of Senate Bill 761 which was passed by the General Assembly and signed into law by the Governor. The provisions of this bill amend § 54.1-600, and create § 54.1-607, of the Code of Virginia.

This new statute provides a definition of "absolute auction," codifies the Board's regulation on advertising (the terms of regulation 18 VAC 18 VAC 25-21-100.A are incorporated into § 54.1-607.A), and establishes a requirement for advertising an auction sale of real property (see § 54.1-607.B). These changes became effective on July 1, 2003.

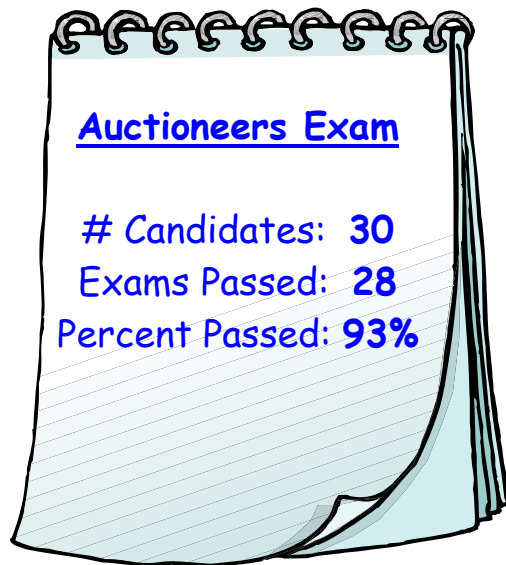

Please read and become familiar with the provisions of § 54.1-607 of the Code of Virginia, as failure to comply with the provisions of this law may result in disciplinary action by the Auctioneers Board. TM

Did You Know . . .

If you conduct an auction where used bedding and upholstered furniture may be sold, you may be subject to additional requirements imposed by the Virginia Department of Health. § 32.1-215 of the Bedding and Upholstered Furniture Law states in part that "No person shall rent, offer to expose for sale, barter, give away, or dispose of in any other commercial manner any article of bedding or upholstered furniture . . . unless since last used such secondhand article has been sanitized by a reasonable process approved by the Commissioner." The Virginia Department of Health has a specific website devoted to the Virginia bedding law, which you can access at: <http://www.vdh.state.va.us/epi/bed/index.htm> TM

Examination Statistics

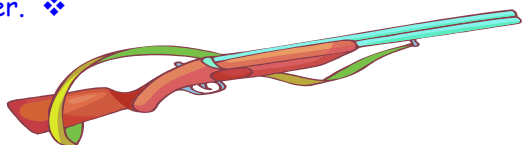

The following statistics are a compilation of the Virginia candidates who sat for the Auctioneers examination between January 1, 2003, and April 30, 2003.

Auctions Involving the Sale of Firearms

The Board office is frequently asked questions regarding requirements for auctioning firearms. While the Virginia Auctioneers Board regulates the profession of auctioneering, the sale of firearms is regulated by the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms (ATF). A good deal of information regarding firearm sales as it relates to auctioneering can be found on the ATF's website at <http://www.atf.gov>.

In addition to the ATF, an auctioneer considering auctioning firearms should contact the local police station or sheriff's office to determine whether or not the locality has any requirements regarding this matter. ❖

License Reinstatement vs. Renewal

Approximately 45 days prior to the expiration date of a license, a renewal card is sent to the licensee outlining the amount due and the procedures for renewal. If the licensee does not receive the renewal card, he or she is still obligated to renew the license and submit all required bond documentation in a timely manner.

Failure to renew the license within 30 days after the license expires will result in the licensee being required to pay a late renewal fee. If the license has been expired for six months or more, but less than two years, the licensee must apply for reinstatement of the license. Once the reinstatement application has been submitted to the Board, it is evaluated to determine if the applicant meets the renewal requirements. If the reinstatement application is approved, the license will be reinstated and will be deemed as having been continuous without interruption. In the event that a licensee violates a law or regulation during the time period before the license was reinstated by the Board, the Board has the authority to discipline the license holder for the violation if disciplinary action is warranted.

After the license has been expired for two years or more, the applicant must submit a new application and meet current entry requirements that are in effect as of the date the application is received by the Board office. The applicant would also be required to submit the examination fee and sit for and pass the Virginia License Auctioneer's Examination or apply through reciprocity (see article page 7). Any auctioneering activity conducted between the time the previous license expired and the effective date of the new license shall be considered unlicensed activity.

This information is meant to provide a summary of the renewal and reinstatement requirements found in Part III of the Board's regulations; however, it should not be relied on exclusively. Please refer to the Board's regulations for more information. ❖

Licensing by Reciprocity

There are two methods for becoming licensed as an auctioneer in Virginia. One way is by taking the Board-approved examination, the other way is through reciprocity. A person who wishes to become licensed in Virginia through reciprocity would not have to be subject to an examination provided the requirements and standards under which the license was issued in the reciprocal state are substantially equivalent to those established by the Board. The person who is applying for licensure by reciprocity would need to be currently licensed in the reciprocal state. Likewise, a person currently licensed in Virginia would be able to apply for an auctioneers license by reciprocity with another state with whom the Board has established a reciprocity agreement. The states with which the Virginia Board has reciprocal agreements are:

Alabama	N. Carolina
Florida	Pennsylvania
Georgia	S. Carolina
Indiana	Tennessee
Kentucky	Texas
Louisiana	W. Virginia

Please note that the Board may deny an application if the licensed auctioneer has been found guilty by any regulatory board or agency of violating any regulations or laws in the course of performing auctioneering duties, or by a court of any criminal offense or material misrepresentation in the course of performing auctioneering duties. Please see 18 VAC 25-21-40 for more information regarding licensure by reciprocity. ❖

Disciplinary Actions

The following is a summary of actions taken against regulants by the Virginia Auctioneers Board.
