ADMINISTRATIVE LAW DUE PROCESS

92
LICENSING ORDERS

786 IFFs
Applicants with criminal history evaluated against nine factors on case-by-case basis.

527
DISCIPLINARY ORDERS

226 IFFs
Prima facie cases result in 20% fewer disciplinary IFFs.

874
CONSENT ORDERS

0 IFFs
60% of disciplinary cases resolved through ratified consent orders without need for IFF.

DPOR boards cannot deny anyone's license application, or discipline a licensee, without documenting the facts behind the case decision.

An INFORMAL FACT-FINDING (IFF) conference is the due process administrative proceeding that puts those facts "on the record," giving applicants and licensees the opportunity to present evidence about their case.

Licensing IFFs

Allow applicants to provide additional documentation or clarification in support of their qualifications.

Also used for evaluation of applicants who disclose prior criminal convictions.

Disciplinary IFFs

Occur after a complaint investigation suggests a potential regulatory violation.

Afterward, board reviews IFF transcript, summary, and entire case file before rendering its decision.

Prima facie cases

Files forwarded directly to the board without the need for an IFF. (Board may remand for IFF at any point prior to case decision.)

Permissible if respondent fails to acknowledge IFF notifications or affirmatively waives the right.

Consent Orders

Voluntary, negotiated settlement agreements that bypass an IFF, often saving time and resources.

If the board ratifies the terms, the licensee waives the right to appeal and the case is closed without further action.

1 A prior conviction is not an automatic barrier to licensure.

When considering an applicant with criminal history, Section 54.1-204 of the Code of Virginia directs DPOR boards to consider nine factors:

- 1) nature and seriousness of the crime;
- 2) the crime's relationship to the profession;
- 3) if being licensed gives opportunity to engage in similar criminal activity;
- 4) the crime's connection to the ability to engage in the profession;

- 5) age at the time of the offense;
- 6) amount of time since applicant's criminal offense;
- 7) extent of past criminal history;
- 8) applicant's conduct and work activity;
- 9) efforts toward rehabilitation while incarcerated or after release.

REMEDIAL EDUCATION

SUSPENSION OR REVOCATION

Boards cannot order a licensee to refund money, correct deficiencies, or provide other personal remedies.

DPOR is funded by license fees, not by any tax revenues. We adjust fees in accordance with the Callahan Act to make sure revenues are sufficient to cover expenses, but not excessive. Fee-setting is conducted pursuant to the Administrative Process Act's public comment and executive branch review requirements.

We welcome public participation! Board meetings are open to the public and minutes are posted online. Sign up on the Virginia Regulatory Town Hall to receive notification of meetings and regulatory actions: www.townhall.virginia.gov
